The Vision 21: Transforming Victim Services initiative—supported by the Office for Victims of Crime (OVC), Office of Justice Programs, U.S. Department of Justice—expands the vision and impact of the crime victim assistance field. Initiated in 2013, Vision 21 was the first comprehensive examination into the crime victims field in 15 years. Vision 21 projects engage a broad spectrum of service providers, advocates, criminal justice professionals, allied practitioners, and policymakers to address crime victim issues through a lens broader than their everyday work.

Vision 21: Linking Systems of Care for Children and Youth

Addresses Vision 21 Recommendation #4
Build and institutionalize capacity through an infusion of technology, training, and innovation.

Project Vision
Our Nation’s children and youth experience crime and victimization at alarming rates. OVC’s Vision 21: Transforming Victim Services Final Report found that these young victims are underserved, and the systems charged with caring for them provide fragmented and ineffective responses for children and their families.

Through this demonstration project, OVC wants to learn what is needed to bring healthcare, child welfare, justice, and other systems together at a statewide level to coordinate and align efforts to ensure a timely and seamless response to young victims, their families, and caregivers, no matter the system of entry.

Project Objectives
- Identify and promote healing for victims of crime.
- Provide or coordinate prevention and intervention services to youth and families experiencing trauma and victimization.
- Build capacity within communities to meet the needs of youth exposed to violence.

Project Participants
Each demonstration site has a project period of up to 6 years, during which they are working to bring together relevant systems and professionals in their state to provide early identification, intervention, and treatment for child and youth victims and their families and caregivers. The sites work strategically and collaboratively with multidisciplinary stakeholders to ensure that prevention and intervention services are determined by the needs of the family, and that community resources are provided with holistic and coordinated intent. Sustainable practices and policies are being explored for long-term use and potential replication in other communities. The 4 states participating in this transformative work are Illinois, Montana, Ohio, and Virginia.

The National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges will provide ongoing training and technical assistance to the two demonstration sites. Coordinated strategies to identify, intervene, and treat child and youth victims, their families, and caregivers will be planned and developed.

ICF International is conducting an evaluation of this project, with funding from the National Institute of Justice, to determine project impact, effectiveness, and lessons learned.
